Adnan Husain, K. E. Fleming : A Faithful Sea: The Religious Cultures of the Mediterranean, 1200-1700 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised A Faithful Sea: The Religious Cultures of the Mediterranean, 1200-1700:

meet my expectations. Some of chapters were too detailed and more for professors. I did get only a general idea of the Religious Cultures of the time. I don't think I will remember much of it, even though I am seriously interested in the subject.

Contemporary academia relies upon categorization. One can study Africa or Europe; East or West; the Middle Ages or the Early Modern period. In this innovative collection of essays, the Mediterranean is taken as a whole. The birthplace of the three principal monotheistic religions, it is shown to be a distinct cultural space characterized by hybridity, diversity, and cultural dynamism. Distinctive both in scope and approach, A Faithful Sea is insistent that regional history is far more than a mere aggregate of various national histories. Addressing a wide array of Mediterranean religious tradition and identity in the Medieval and Early Modern Periods, the essays unite in highlighting the cross-fertilization of people and society within the region. With contributions from leading specialists on Judaism, Christianity, and Islam, readers from all backgrounds will find the concept of "Mediterraneity" both original and powerful.

"A beguiling entry into a fascinating history. Subtle analyses, rich case studies, and moving vignettes beckon the reader into a past in which Muslims, Christians, and Jews built their worlds side by side." -- David Nirenberg - Professor of Medieval History, Johns Hopkins University
"An erudite collection of essays examining the religious culture of the Mediterranean Sea." -- Nabil Matar - Professor of English at Florida Institute of Technology, and author of 'In the Lands of the Christians'
"Charts a direction for Mediterranean history that is sure to be influential." -- Thomas Burman - Associate Professor of History, University of Tennessee
"This wide-ranging and scholarly collection of articles embraces the artistic, literary, cultural, economic, and legal historiography of the pre-modern Mediterranean. It advances every subject on which it touches." -- Peregrine Horden - Author of 'The Corrupting Sea: A Study of Mediterranean History'
