By S. Lavoie One of the most complete books on a complex subject. Gives a broad perspective on the situation of Islam in Russia and the conflicts related to Islamic fundamentalism in the North Caucasus. A must for everyone whose interested in the region. Sylvain

Lavoie

This richly detailed study traces the shared history of Russia and Islam in expanding compass - from the Tatar civilization within the Russian heartland, to the conquered territories of the Caucasus and Central Asia, to the larger geopolitical and security context of contemporary Russia on the civilizational divide. The study's distinctive analytical drive stresses political and geopolitical relationships over time and into the very complicated present. Rich with insight, the book is also an incomparable source of factual information about Russia's Muslim populations, religious institutions, political organizations, and ideological movements.

"This is a splendid book, Dr. Hunter makes a real contribution with this painstaking analysis of Islam in Russia. She clearly notes not only the fragmented nature of Russian Islam, but also demonstrates Islam's role in Russian domestic politics and foreign policy. I expect that this will be a major reference work for many years to come."
