Personally I thought a researched book would use the German archives and really bring new information to light. The page on Willi Mentz is poorly researched as well.Overall a poor booj1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Introduction to

Treblinka By N Thompson An essential first read for students seeking the history of and witness accounts dealing with this particular death camp. Since reading it I am hooked and have ordered from several more survivor testimony books on Treblinka. 3 of 4 people found the following review helpful. The SS of Treblinka By Robert J. Ponegalek A very good book, but it would be better if there was more background on the SS and ukrainian guards. But as the book forward states, no person really wants to come forward about their being there. The book has very good appendixes, Overall I really enjoyed it and finished reading it in one week. At times I really did not want to stop reading it. R. ponegalek

The story of the SS of Treblinka is a highly compelling one. This book provides vivid descriptions of events in the camp from the point of view of the men that witnessed them. Using interviews, personal letters, and unpublished diaries, some supplied by historian Marcin Zborska in Warsaw and published for the first time, Ian Baxter gives a fascinating insight into the camp that saw the murder of some 800,000 Jews. The book paints a chilling picture of the staff at Treblinka, showing the SS-men during breaks from their murderous activities, relaxing in their barracks, or visiting the camp zoo with their families. Diary extracts will allow a reader inside the heads of these men who, in some cases felt themselves fortunate to be posted at Treblinka. The inner working of the camp are exposed here in unprecedented detail from the techniques of mass murder to the bizarre rituals that developed within the camp.

About the Author Ian Baxter is a military historian specializing in German 20th century military history. His titles include German Armoured Warfare of World War II and Panzer Divisions at War 1939-1945.
