Five Stars By Customer great condition. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. but if someone was looking for a quick and easy way to familiarize themselves with background on the era By Lizzie girl Riddled with editorial comment and sloppily written with an overuse of colloquialism ("If you know what I mean"), this is an entertaining if not academic look at the world of international relations since 1945. I would NOT suggest it as reading for coursework, but if someone was looking for a quick and easy way to familiarize themselves with background on the era, this text would suffice. If one has an interest beyond a general gist, I would go looking elsewhere and try to find something more rigorous. 0 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Sham entry. By Steve Barr Great book. Available new from publisher for $28. This is an overpriced, non-publisher entry.

New emphasis on the impacts of globalization, events in the Middle East, and political and economic changes in East Asia as well as new information and maps throughout are among the features of this thoroughly revised edition of The World Since 1945. The text traces the major political, economic, and ideological patterns that have evolved in the global arena from the end of World War II to the present, providing the background needed for a solid understanding of contemporary international relations. Written to be student friendly, it has made its place as the text of choice in scores of introductory IR and world history courses.

Clearly conceived, written with verve and moral commitment, it should be welcomed by student readers. (World History Bulletin) McWilliams and Piotrowski provide a thoughtful and integrated appreciation of a huge topic and have produced a book that deserves a wide readership. (Australia and World Affairs) Exceedingly effective.... [The authors provide] a coherent summary of international history during the Cold War and beyond. (Journal of World History) About the Author Wayne C. McWilliams and Harry Piotrowski are emeritus professors in the Department of History at Towson University.
